Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A cold front will move through Northwest California this morning bringing a chance of light showers to areas north of Cape Mendocino. A reinforcing cold front will bring another chance of light showers north of the Cape on Monday followed by mostly dry and cold conditions for much of the coming week.

Medford Weather:

Very cold air is expected to flow into the forecast area early this week. The system at the leading edge of the arctic air mass will produce some precipitation, particularly along the Cascades, but with snow levels dropping rapidly on Monday, some lower elevation snow is possible by Monday evening. Cold air is expected to then remain over the region through midweek before gradually warming through for the remainder of the week.

Reno Weather:

Temperatures will rise to near seasonal averages this afternoon ahead of another cold front. Light snow showers are possible with the front mainly north of I-80 into Monday. A colder low pressure system will provide very cold weather with a better potential for widespread snow showers on Tuesday. Temperatures will remain well below normal through Thursday with a gradual warmup next weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

High pressure today into Monday will bring dry and seasonable weather. On Tuesday a strong but mainly dry cold front will move through the state. Isolated showers with snow levels to around 2500 feet across the Bay Area; however, the main story and impact will be blustery winds late Tuesday into Wednesday, especially in the hills. High pressure rebuilds Thursday through next weekend with dry and seasonable weather.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Mainly dry weather will continue for the next two days with patchy frost. A cold upper trough may bring some showers late Monday through Tuesday with low snow levels. Breezy to strong north to northeast winds are likely Tuesday and New Year's Eve.

Hanford Weather:

Mostly clear skies will continue for the forecast area as weak high pressure dominates. Some patchy late night through early morning fog is possible today as well as some areas of frost. By midweek, temperatures will be colder with a slight chance of showers Tuesday into Wednesday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure over the region will keep a dry weather pattern in place through Tuesday. A brisk and cold weather pattern will move into the area as a trough of low pressure originating from Canada drops into the region for mid-to-late next week.

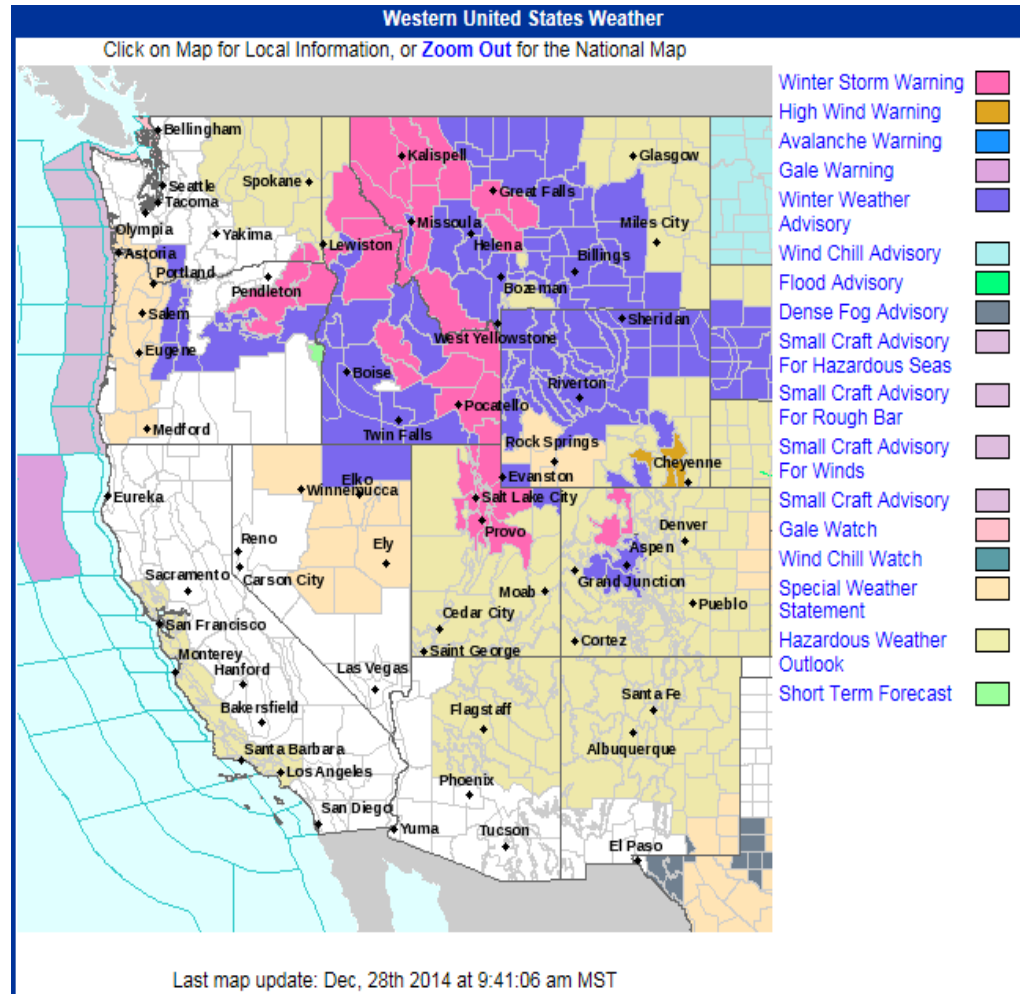

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Fair and cold weather will continue through Monday. A storm system moving south all the way from Canada will bring precipitation late Tuesday through Wednesday night to the region, with a few lingering showers Thursday. Snow levels will be very low, likely down to around 2000 feet by Wednesday morning. Significant snowfall is likely in the high deserts and mountains and Southern California. Travel impacts should be anticipated for the New Year's holiday. A thunderstorm is even possible late Tuesday night and Wednesday near the coast. Fair weather will return by Friday under northwest flow with temperatures remaining little below seasonal normal.

Southeast California Weather:

Below normal temperatures are expected through the rest of this weekend and early next week with occasional high clouds. Another cold and possibly wet low pressure system will move into the region by midweek with the potential for desert rain and mountain snow. Dry but cool weather is expected to return by next weekend.
